Restrictions were lifted in Sweden a little over 2 weeks ago, and Gothenburg artists ELD are straight out of the traps with a brand new track 'Transformation is Necessary', new video and live show to set them both alight.

'Transformation is Necessary', which releases on October 29th, is the first single from the electro-indie group since their twinned EP's Golv and Vokal hit the airwaves in 2018/19. With the pandemic allowing the group to delicately and doggedly focus on their craft, ELD's soundscape has arrived at the next level.

'Transformation is Necessary' is a bold, dark electro composition. Opening with an arresting vocal sample from the Swedish Jazz artist Lindha Kallerdahl, which bleeds into a pounding beat, the track is trancelike, tribal and all encompassing, casting a large shadow and filling your speakers with an awesome tremble. The brooding saxophone on the track comes courtesy of the Danish musician Lars Greve, a touring member of Bon Iver's.

Accompanying the track is a video of equal caliber which was made on a shoe-string budget, but with a team of 10 collaborators bringing their time and expertise to an underground space in the heart Gothenburg. The video for 'Transformation is Necessary' was made using a collection of early 90's analog vhs equipment found at various flea markets and CCTV cameras. It's a gloomy, glitchy, 4 minute trip.

ELD consider themselves a community before a band and the production level of the video is a testament to the devotion of its members. It takes a village to make a video like this - on an invisible budget.

Both the video and single are set for release on October 29th 2021. And to launch them into space ELD will play a scalding live set at Vega Bryggeriet, fittingly on Halloween weekend - October 30th.
